The pillow will light up after someone has been there, triggered by a pressure sensor. This way, the light becomes a representation of leaving traces. Depending on how long a person is there, the longer and stronger trace will be left behind for the next person to see.